Wakayama Castle 和歌山城

Wakayama Castle was built in 1585 by the order of Hideyoshi Toyotomi. After the downfall of Toyotomi Family, Yorinobu, the 10th son of Ieyasu Tokugawa, became the lord of the castle. It is one of the most highly rated castles in Japan. There are 600 cherry blossom trees inside the castle, and it is now famous for its cherry blossom. The cherry blossom festival is from late March to early April.

Castle Tower

天守閣

The original castle tower was a wooden building built over 400 years ago, but it was rebuilt in 1958 with concrete. The purpose of the castle tower was not living, but for the storage of weapons and armors. Nowadays, the castle tower is used as the exhibit for weapons and armors from the Edo period and items related to the Tokugawa Family. *Edo Period 1603-1867

Ninomaru

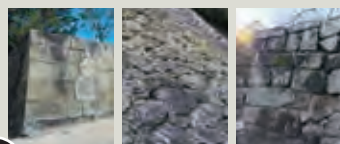

二の丸

The lord of the castle was living in Honmaru until early Edo period, but due to the inconvenient location of Honmaru, he moved to Ninomaru. Ninomaru was also the administrative building for officials to carry out governmental duties. The ladies-in-waiting lived in the building lined in Ninomaru. Now, Ninomaru is a space for the general public to relax.

Pay attention to the stone walls!

The construction method of the stone walls differ by the time period. Look for the three different patterns!

Look for the human-shaped tree root!

The Holy Land of Waka “Wakanoura”

1300 years ago, when the emperor visited Wakayama, he was touched by the lively tidal flats of Wakanoura. The court poet accompanied the emperor wrote poem based on this scenery. The poem was so magnificent that it became the model of waka (traditional Japanese poetry).

Tamatsushima-jinja Shrine

玉津島神社

A shrine located at the bottom of the rock mountains of Tamatsushima facing the tidal flats. Since the goddess of Waka, Sotoorihome, is enshrined here, the emperors and poets came here to pray and dedicated their waka to this shrine.

The Holy Land of Tokugawa Family “Wakanoura”

Wakanoura was the holy land of Tokugawa Family 400 years ago when Ieyasu Tokugawa's 10th son, Yorinobu, became the lord of the castle.

Yorinobu built Toshog-gu Shrine on the mountain over at the Northwest side of Wakanoura to worship his father, and Tahoto (a two-story pagoda) on Mt. Imose in memory of his mother, Yojuin.

Also, he built Sandan-kyo Bridge that brought the public to Kankaikaku (the ocean-view palace) on Mt. Imose.

Tahoto

Kishu Toshog-gu Shrine

紀州東照宮

The shrine was built to pray for the prosperity of the Tokugawa Family and is luxuriously decorated under Yorinobu's order with sculptures that reminds him of the early days when he went on practice falconry with his father, Ieyasu, and the story of “Toryumon” which a carp went up stream against a waterfall and finally became a dragon. The path way to the shrine is lined with 80 stone lanterns dedicated by the retainers of Tokugawa Family. The 108 stone stairs named Samuraizaka which was also piled up by the retainers represents the number of earthly desires of human beings.

Wakamatsuri

和歌祭

The grand rite and festival started in 1622 at Kishu Toshog-gu Shrine has continued for almost 400 years. The highlight of this festival is “Mikoshioroshi” which about 100 young men carry the Mikoshi (a carriage represents the God) that weighs about one ton to go down the stone stairs.

People dress in colourful costumes to march along with the Mikoshi. There are also other performances along the side for the audiences to enjoy, such as “menkaburi” where people put on interesting masks to surprise the children.

Yosuien Garden

養翠園

A Japanese Garden which incorporated a part of the scenery of Wakanoura, was built by the 10th lord of the castle, Harutomi Tokugawa. The connecting corridor inside Yosuitei (a building inside Yosuien Garden) is slanted, so in order to adjust to angle of the corridor, the tatami mats and the paper sliding doors are rhombus-shaped.
